

About Us

Lucan Biddulph is a picturesque rural community with colourful past. The area is unique in that it was once the site of a black community called Wilberforce Colony prior to European settlement. By the mid 1830's immigrant settlers from Ireland arrived and settled throughout the township, resulting in its dominant Irish heritage. One of these families became well known — The Donnelly family — who were known for their exploits and the eventual tragic death of 5 members of the family in 1880.

The rich heritage is captured in our Main Street Museum that exhibits stories and artifacts on these and other historically significant events including agriculture, local sports and genealogy.

Our Main Street is quaint and alive with excellent dining establishments, craft, artwork and antique shops where you will find unique shopping in a small town setting.
